I also liked the Green pick and in hindsight I probably should have take him. I think the Browns will try him out at WR for kicks and gigs.

I knew the Ty Simpson pick would catch some flack, but I stand by it. Best possible landing spot. Just need to hodl with diamond hands and wait for him to rise.

Too bad you couldn't put him on your taxi squad for a couple of years. Now he languishes on the bench. Seems like a lot to commit/invest for a first round pick.

If your fantasy team is a contender, then I would want a better chance of getting some immediate points out of the 1.09 pick. I think there's a good chance Corbin could have grabbed him at 2.01 while adding a top IDP at 1.09.

You're not wrong, RR was ahead of the other drafts and I was the only one to use a 1st on him. But I can't help myself with these rookie QBs. If you hit, you could have a starter for 15 years. You can critique me the same way the media is critiquing the Rams for drafting him. But you've gotta set yourself up for the future.

If Simpson steps in this year and balls out, I could flip him for 2x 1st round picks and get some win now guys. Also, I don't get the taxi squad argument. If I did take him in the 2nd and taxi him, he could be poached and assigned to a short contract out of my control. If I can assign him to a 5 or 6 year contract now, I still get 3-4 years of production from him before I even have to worry about tags. Keeping him on the active roster is the way to go IMO

I was hoping he fell into the 2nd round as i was thinking the same thing ! Stafford only has so much time left before he hangs them up and could be the starter for many eyars once he gets his chance!

I don't think anyone would or should use a 1st to poach a guy and put him on a short contract. They're spending the first for less return. If they did, then look at it like this person is going to give me a 1st for one year of Ty Simpson and call their bluff.

Another good point. But then the poacher has control and can tag/extend him. A Stafford injury and a couple good starts out of Simpson and I could see someone willing to value him at 2x 1sts.

I'd just rather not risk it and keep that control. I can balance my contracts even if he is a dud. Upside is too high to give anyone a smidge of control over his situation on my team.

Nice to see you setting the market so early for him. Good luck getting that return. If people don't like him now, they probably won't like him even if he is a temporary starter.
